Fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Jesus created much excitement in His day through His preaching, teaching, and healing. Today, the Church communicates that same wonder and grace by those active in priesthood, religious life, and lay ministries. If you think God is calling you to a Church vocation, call Fr. Hansoo at 416-968-0997.

Virtue of the Month: Love

~Unconditional Love~
By: Olivia Boucher

Grade 7 Student at Our Lady of Perpetual Help School

Unconditional love is in my view, the most important type of love. I feel this way because unconditional love is present in the relationships I share with my family, friends, and God. More importantly, unconditional love provides me the comfort of knowing my family will always be there for me.

Unconditional love is unbreakable. It is an affection that remains despite the actions of another. It is looking past personal faults, and loving others for who they are on the inside. Most significantly, it is a love that transcends anger and disagreement. At its core, unconditional love is a bond that promotes respect for all mankind.

I experience unconditional love in a number of ways, but I feel it most strongly with my family. I never question my love for my family, or their love for me. When we have disagreements, as all families do, we forgive each other instantly. Such a relationship is only possible by having unconditional love for each other. I share a similar relationship with God.

I feel our love is unconditional because whenever I do something bad, I am certain God will forgive me. Every Sunday in church, we all ask God to relieve us of our sins, and he does so without hesitation. This makes me think that God unconditionally loves everyone, and for his generosity we should all love him back unconditionally.

My faith in God’s love helps me in my relationships with friends. His example of unconditional love extends to my friendships. I am able to accept my friends for who they are and continue to love them in spite of how they may act at times.

My mother taught me FORESIGHT:
